- Historical

Following is a selection of early sources on the Eucharist.

The Didache (c. 100 AD), also known as The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles presents a picture of early Christian community, including baptism (chapter 7) and prayers for communal meal (eucharist) in chapters 9 and 10.

The Divine Liturgy of St. James, traditionally attributed to the first bishop of Jerusalem, St. James, brother of the Lord.

Egeria an incomplete manuscript in which a fourth century Christian woman describes her pilgrimage to the Holy Land, including detailed descriptions of monastic life, holy places and liturgies.

Constitution of the Holy Apostles a third-century or disputably fourth-century compilation of material of differing ages, notably the latter portions contain information on the instruction of catechumens, baptism, and canons. Some of the language mirrors that of the Didache.

FDLC Liturgical Catechesis Project

Office of Social Teaching

Rerum Novarum (On the Condition of Labor) -- Pope Leo XIII, 1891

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Text in Spanish Online Concordance

This seminal work on modern Catholic social thought addresses the plight of the industrial workers in the wake of the Industrial Revolution. It calls for the protection of the weak and the poor through the pursuit of justice while excluding socialism and class struggle as legitimate principles of change. It affirms the dignity of work, the right to private property, and the right to form and join professional associations.

Quadragesimo Anno (After Forty Years) -- Pope Pius XI, 1931

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Text in Spanish

Writing in response to the alarming concentration of wealth and power in the socio-economic realm, Pius XI calls for the reestablishment of a social order based on the principle of subsidiarity. In commemorating the 40th anniversary of Rerum Novarum, this encyclical reaffirms the need for a social order animated by justice.

Mater et Magistra (Christianity and Social Progress) -- Pope John XXIII, 1961

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Text in Spanish Online Concordance Text on Vatican web site

Applying the teachings of his predecessors to modern problems, and affirming the role of the Church as a teacher, and as a nurturing guardian of the poor and oppressed, John XXIII calls for a greater awareness of the need for all peoples to live as one community with a common good. Special attention is focused on the plight of the farmers and farm workers in depressed rural, agricultural economies.

Pacem in Terris (Peace on Earth) -- Pope John XXIII, 1963

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Text in Spanish Online Concordance

Covering the entire spectrum of relations between individuals, between the individual and the community, and between nations, John XXIII affirms the inviolability of human rights. Peace, based on mutual trust, can be well-founded only if undergirded by a unity of right order in human affairs arising from a genuine respect for and adherence to the law of God.

Gaudium et Spes (Pastoral Constitution on the Church in the Modern World)

Vatican Council II, 1965

Part One Part Two Notable quotations Bibliography

Online Concordance

Calling for a new sense of service by the Church in a rapidly changing world, the Council presents the ethical framework of the Church's commitment to pastoral work in the world. This servant Church addresses itself to the real concerns and problems faced by Christians living in the modern age and calls for a development based on an unqualified acceptance of the inherent dignity of the human person.

FDLC Liturgical Catechesis Project

Populorum Progressio (On the Development of Peoples) -- Pope Paul VI, 1967

Official text Notable quotations. Bibliography

Text in Spanish Online Concordance

Calling attention to the worsening marginalization of the poor, Paul VI presents the various dimensions of an integral human development and the necessary conditions for growth in the solidarity of peoples. Only with an accompanying theological reflection on liberation from injustice and genuine human values can there be true development towards a more human condition.

Octogesima Adveniens (A Call to Action) -- Pope Paul VI, 1971

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Text in Spanish

Realizing the need for a genuine renewal in domestic and international societal structures, Paul VI calls on Christians to live up to the duty of participation in social and political reform as a way of discovering the truth and living out the Gospel.

Justitia in Mundo (Justice in the World) -- Synod of Bishops, 1971

Official text Notable quotations Bibliography

Calling attention to the structural roots of injustice afflicting human relations, the Bishops declare that action in the pursuit of justice, and participation in the transformation of the world are constitutive elements in the Church's mission of preaching the Gospel.

Laborem Exercens (On Human Work) -- Pope John Paul II, 1981

Official text Notable quotations The document
in everyday language

Text in Spanish Online Concordance Bibliography

Exhorting Christians everywhere to be involved in the transformation of existing socio-economic systems, John Paul II presents work as a fundamental dimension of human existence through which the "social question" must be viewed. The meaning of work can only be properly understood when the dignity of labor is taken as an underlying premise.

Sollicitudo Rei Socialis (On Social Concern) -- Pope John Paul II, 1987

Official text Notable quotations The document
in everyday language

Text in Spanish Online Concordance Bibliography

Expanding on the notion of development in Populorum Progressio, John Paul II reviews the state of world development in the past two decades. The moral nature of development leading humanity to the "fullness of being" is emphasized.

Instruction on Certain Aspects of the Theology of Liberation
Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, 1984
Affirming that liberation is first and foremost the freedom from slavery to sin, this document points to the dangers of certain "theologies of liberation" which embrace Marxist premises, and as a consequence, prevent true and holistic human development.

Instruction on Christian Freedom and Liberation
Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, 1986
Responding to the contemporary curtailment of freedoms and widespread oppression, the Congregation reaffirms the Church's determination to advocate for the rights of the poor and the workers, with a view towards establishing changes called for by justice in the social and political order.
